EXAMINE YOUR FAITH! FINDING TRUTH IN A WORLD OF LIES

By

Pamela Christian

It was a life crisis that award-winning author, Pamela Christian, suffered that caused her to realize that she'd been woefully deceived in her basic beliefs about life and the human existence. Some years later when reading an article from ABC News about Americans being surprisingly tolerant of religious faith, she found herself outraged and instantly knew she had to do something to address the widespread deception. Christian explains:

I expected to read that Americans are tolerant of people having faith in religions different from their own. Instead I learned that Americans are attempting to take various tenets of different religious beliefs to create a "religion" of their own. This is deception of the worst kind. And the sad part is that those who are deceived are unaware. That is the very nature of deception. Unless someone respectfully gets in their face or they suffer a crisis of their own, they could die deceived. Why put yourself in line for a crisis when my life experience and book can help?

This book is written for those who are not confident about what truth is, who believe there has to be a more confident way to live, who struggle with the many conflicting truth claims, and who are willing to reconsider their own beliefs. Christian begins the book exploring the claim that truth is relative. Through logic and reason, Christian presents the case that truth being absolute has far greater merit. Then she presents an overview of the basic tenets of the five major world religions and the New Age movement, to demonstrate that these religions cannot be blended without some serious compromise. Next, using extra-biblical historical evidence, she presents compelling reason to conclude that the Bible is unique as contrasted to all other documents of religious authority. From this collective premise, she compellingly considers the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, asking the reader one last questions, "Will you believe?"

Well-researched, and using a distinctly personal application of apologetics, Christian has successfully written a book that is endorsed by: Josh McDowell (Author and International Speaker), Dan Story (M.A. Christian Apologetics, Author and Teacher, and Craig J. Hazen, Ph.D. (Founder and Director, Graduate Program in Christian Apologetics, Biola University).

Also available is a companion Study Guide suitable for individual or group study.

Interview Questions

- You talk a lot about truth and even the notion of absolute truth. Can you give an example of absolute truth that most people can identify with?
- What do you believe makes Christianity unique or exclusive from all other religious faiths?
- You spend a good part of your book doing an overview of other major belief systems. Why?
- You write that Eastern ideas emanating from Hinduism began to gain popularity in the west because of Hinduism's tolerance for diversity. Are we seeing the results of this now in our culture?
- How can Christians who stand for absolute ideas of moral truth and behavior communicate the value and importance of these ideas in a pluralistic culture?
- In your section on secularism you say they deny that ethics come from a higher being. Can a person be moral without embracing Judeo-Christian ethics?
- Is there anything wrong with the idea of free inquiry?
- The resurrection of Jesus is pivotal to faith in Him. What are some evidences for the resurrection?
